

In an uphill battle, why bother with unity?

Perot may have lost credibility by stealing the Reform Party nomination from his challenger, former Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm. But the Reform Party is not the only group with dissension in the ranks.

Here's the founder of the Green Party taking aim at party standard-bearer Ralph Nader: "... Randy Toler is calling on Ralph Nader to end his double-talking hypocrisy about asking everybody to disclose but not himself. Nader also criticized Clinton for no primary competition, yet he illegally conspired with the granola-chomping California Green Party to keep founder Toler's name off the ballot, leaving no competition in the Green Party California presidential primary. ..."

In another news release, Toler calls on Nader to come out against foreign aid to Israel. "If Nader is truly the enemy of special interests as he claims, let his stand on Israeli aid be known."

Well, no one ever said third-party movements were monoliths.
